B 次の英文は、学校新聞に載った、服装規定についての記事である。三人の生徒の意見の要約(30～32)として最も適当なものを、それぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

The topic for this week’s “Speak Out” column is whether there should be a mandatory dress code in our school. The first opinion selected was sent in by Monica Molina, a tenth grader. She writes:

There needs to be some limitation to what students can wear to school. Without a dress code students could wear clothing that is offensive, inappropriate, distracting, or threatening. Clothing with offensive slogans and pictures that promote drugs, alcohol and smoking should not be allowed. Pictures and slogans which are offensive to race and gender should not be allowed, either. Clothing with distracting pictures or writing could take students’ attention away from studying, which is why students are here. Clothing with messages, writing or pictures that are threatening to students or teachers shouldn’t be worn. Being in a school with no dress code would be very bad. A dress code should be made, taking into consideration everyone who studies and works in the school.

- ① A lot of students wear clothing that is threatening to others.
- ② Clothing that has writing which encourages smoking is not so bad.
- ③ Dress rules should protect everyone in school from being offended.
- ④ Most students don't wear appropriate clothing to school.

Our next opinion was submitted by Kishan Santha, an eleventh grader, who says:

Students should be free to choose what they want to wear to school. Granted, there are some shirts that have offensive writing on them but the majority of messages are not offensive. Most messages do not negatively affect our learning and attention in class. If we have a dress code at all, it should state that students cannot wear clothes with insulting words on them. But, that is it. I'm sure that whether there is a dress code or not, my friends will wear what they know is fine and appropriate in school. Teachers should trust us to be able to determine whether or not the clothes we decide to wear are appropriate.

31

- ① A dress code cannot prevent students from wearing clothing with offensive messages.
- ② In most cases, students can determine what clothing is acceptable to wear to school.
- ③ Teachers can be trusted to make a dress code that students will accept.
- ④ Students should be encouraged to make a school dress code for themselves.

The third opinion selected was written by Kim Higgins, a twelfth grader. She says:

I believe that students can express themselves with their clothing. However, there should be some kind of dress code at school. It should not be a strict code, but a realistic one that everyone can follow. A rule that I find reasonable is that a shirt or blouse should not be so short that part of the person's body can be seen. It particularly bothers some people when they can see someone else's bare stomach. Also, we should not have to see other people's underwear. This offends some people and can be considered insulting. If we don't have school dress rules, with today's fashion, things could get out of control.

- ① Clothing is not a good way for students to show their feelings.
- ② Current dress styles don't require a specific school dress code.
- ③ Showing one's stomach is fashionable and not so offensive.
- ④ Some guidance is needed to help students dress with moderation.

We would like to thank Monica, Kishan and Kim for submitting their opinions to "Speak Out." They have given us a number of important points that we must consider seriously before everyone votes on this policy.

C 次の文章の 33 ～ 35 に入れるのに最も適当なものを, それぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

A role model is an ideal person whom we admire. Role models may have various backgrounds and ways of looking at things. However, they all inspire others through their actions. I would like to introduce two people I admire.

Mr. Chico Mendes is one of my role models. He was born in the Amazon region in 1944 to a poor Brazilian family that had farmed rubber from rubber trees for many generations. They loved the rainforest and 33. However, mining companies and cattle ranchers started destroying the Amazon rainforest which is more than 180 million years old. They burned and cut down hundreds of thousands of trees, endangering the living environment of the people there. Chico began a movement that organized ordinary workers to oppose those harmful practices. The movement 34, as Chico's efforts led people in other countries to protect the earth's forests and the forests' native inhabitants. Mr. Chico Mendes is a role model for me because of his courage, dedication and self-sacrificing work to protect not only the Amazon rainforest, but the natural environment of the entire planet.

Dr. Mae Jemison, the first Afro-American female astronaut to travel into space, is my other role model. Mae was born into a middle-class American family. She entered university at the age of 16, and went on to receive degrees in Chemical Engineering, African-American Studies and Medicine. She became a fluent speaker of Japanese, Russian and Swahili. In 1992, she was the science mission specialist on the space shuttle Endeavour, on a cooperative mission between the U.S. and Japan. 35, Dr. Jemison has used her education to improve the lives of others by providing primary medical care to poor people. She has helped countless people through various educational and medical projects.

The main characteristics of my two role models are that they sympathize with other people’s distress and are committed to improving the world by helping others. They are caring people who use their potential to benefit the world, making it a better place.

A 次の文章と表を読み、下の問い(問1～3)に対する答えとして最も適切なものを、それぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

Satellites are very closely tied to our daily lives. The best example of this is weather observation satellites. During a weather forecast on television, you can see images of cloud patterns over Japan from the Himawari satellite.

In fact, the table below shows the satellite in use in mid-2007 was the sixth in the Himawari series, which stretches back to 1977. The six Himawari satellites have each had different characteristics.

Name	Launch date	Launch site	Rocket	Weight [kg]	Period of service
Himawari 1	July 14, 1977	Florida, USA	Delta	325	April 1978-June 1984
Himawari 2	August 11, 1981	Tanegashima, Japan	N-II	296	April 1982-September 1984
Himawari 3	August 3, 1984	Tanegashima, Japan	N-II	303	September 1984-December 1989
Himawari 4	September 6, 1989	Tanegashima, Japan	H-I	325	December 1989-June 1995
Himawari 5	March 18, 1995	Tanegashima, Japan	H-II	344	June 1995-May 2003
Himawari 6	February 26, 2005	Tanegashima, Japan	H-II A	1,250	June 2005-

Data correct as of June, 2007

Most of the satellites in the Himawari series have had 36 of around six years. However, Himawari 2’s operations were taken over by Himawari 3 after less than three years, and the lifetime of Himawari 5 was extended after there was trouble in launching a new rocket. In 2003, Himawari 5 could no longer be used, which meant there was no functional Himawari satellite in space. As a result, information from an American satellite was used for two years. In 2005, Himawari 6 was launched and the supply of weather photos from Japanese satellites resumed.

Although most of the satellites in this series have been a similar size and weight, Himawari 6 is much bigger than the previous ones as it has air-traffic control as well as weather observation functions. It is the first of a new generation of multi-function satellites.

問 1 From the information in the passage and table, which of the following is the most appropriate for the blank? 36

① a launch date

② an operating lifetime

③ an out-of-service period

④ a repair time

問 2 Which of the following is true about Himawari 6? 37

① It is bigger than the others because it has additional functions.

② It is just five times the weight of Himawari 1.

③ It was taken into space by a Delta rocket from a launch site in Florida.

④ It went into service immediately after its launch.

問 3 How did Japan get satellite weather data after 2003? 38

① An American satellite provided Japan with data.

② Functional Himawari satellites collected data.

③ Himawari 5 was repaired and reused.

④ Himawari 6 was launched immediately.

次の文章を読み、下の問い(問 1～7)の  ～  に入れるのに最も適当なものを、それぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。なお、(1)～(7)は段落の番号を表している。

(配点 42)

- (1) My niece, Ann, is in her third year at university. She has recently started her job search. When she entered the university, she wanted to be an architect and planned to apply for work in an architectural firm. But as she prepared for her job search, she learned that the way people work has changed a lot in the last few years. She discovered that much of the change has occurred because of what is called the IT Revolution. The “IT (Information Technology) Revolution” refers to the dramatic change in the way information is perceived and used in today’s world.
- (2) Over the past 12 to 15 years, the amount and types of data available on the Internet and, in particular, the speed at which we can process the data, have increased to an extent few people could have imagined. These developments have led to new ways of thinking about how we use information and how we work in information-rich environments. Simply put, doing business no longer relies on location; new information-sharing software has made cooperation at a distance convenient and efficient.

- (3) As a result, many new business models have appeared. One such model is a large corporation arranging to have another company, often located in a different country, perform essential tasks. This became possible with the growth of reliable and secure communications and the ability to move massive amounts of data over long distances in an instant. An early example of this arrangement is in the field of accounting. A company in the United States, for instance, first scans all its bills, orders, and wage payments into the computer and sends the documents to an accounting center in, say, Costa Rica. Basic accounting activity is then carried out at that site. Next, the data is returned via the Internet to the original company, where high-level analysis is done.
- (4) Another example of this type of arrangement is reliance on overseas call centers, which have become increasingly common. It has become possible for a telephone operator in India to answer a customer-service call from anywhere in the world, respond directly to the customer and offer a satisfactory solution, at a far lower cost to the company than ever before. Many large companies now depend on such call centers. Today in Japan, when you call a toll-free number, there is a chance that someone in Chingtao, China will answer the phone in Japanese to help solve your problem.
- (5) A second business model made possible by the IT Revolution is one in which work is divided into smaller, more specific tasks performed by individuals in different geographical locations. For example, freelance specialists who may be living at a great distance from each other can work together to produce a new semiconductor design. A member of the group living in California does some initial work on the project and uploads the result onto a server. A colleague in Japan spends the day making further additions to the design. Next, someone in Israel accesses it and does his/her portion of the job. Finally the group member in California downloads it and gives it a final check. Thus, freelance specialists in different parts of the world collaborate to complete a single project.
- (6) A similar example is that of a commercial artist who works in the privacy of her beachside home in Hawaii to create a mail-order catalog for a client in Paris. She uses pictures taken by a photographer in Australia, adds text composed by a writer in Canada, includes artwork she created on her computer, and sends the finished product out to the client for final approval. All this is done digitally and according to each worker’s own schedule. In this way, the best talent in the world can be chosen for each task.

(7) With the knowledge she has acquired in the course of her job search, Ann now understands how the nature of work has changed as a result of the IT Revolution. Although she is still interested in architecture, Ann now realizes that this field offers a broader variety of opportunities. Rather than studying architectural design itself, Ann has decided to become an expert in the specifications and materials that architects need for their designs. She also now knows that there is often not enough work in one office for a specialist of this type. However, she is confident she can work as a freelance specialist in collaboration with a variety of people in different countries. Ann now looks forward to taking advantage of the career opportunities that the IT Revolution has opened up.

問 1 Ann realized that people today work in ways unimagined before because 45.

- ① the amount of data on the Internet can no longer be dealt with effectively
- ② the demand for architects has risen sharply over the last couple of decades
- ③ they think the impact of the IT Revolution is already a thing of the past
- ④ they deal with information entirely differently than in the past

問 2 The statement “doing business no longer relies on location” implies that 46.

- ① business people must be physically close to each other to do their work
- ② business people need to travel abroad more often in order to do their jobs
- ③ people feel that using information is more important than making profits
- ④ people who are not in the same place can successfully work as a team

問 3 In the example described in paragraph (3), the initial work takes place 47.

- ① in the United States and the work is completed in Costa Rica
- ② in Costa Rica and the work is completed in the United States
- ③ in the United States, some work is done in Costa Rica, and the work is completed in the United States
- ④ in Costa Rica, some work is done in the United States, and the work is completed in Costa Rica

問 4 According to paragraph (4), the IT Revolution has 48.

- ① not reduced the cost of doing business

- ② influenced where companies locate their call centers
- ③ increased the demand for people who speak Chinese
- ④ eliminated the need for call centers

問 5 If we divide paragraphs (3) through (7) into three groups according to their topics, which grouping is most appropriate? 49

	Group 1	Group 2	Group 3
①	(3)	(4) (5)	(6) (7)
②	(3) (4)	(5) (6)	(7)
③	(3) (4)	(5)	(6) (7)
④	(3)	(4) (5) (6)	(7)

問 6 When Ann begins working, she 50.

- ① may not be in the same office as the people she works with
- ② will be working at a newly designed toll-free call center
- ③ is likely to move to the city where her employer is located
- ④ wants to join a company where she can stay until retirement

問 7 Discussed in the article is the IT Revolution’s 51.

- ① enormous impact on the way workers, rather than companies, think about work
- ② limited impact on the way workers, rather than companies, think about work
- ③ profound impact on the way workers and companies think about work
- ④ slight impact on the way workers and companies think about work
